Cosmo Girl About Town

Cosmo dines Mile High style

21 June 2013 by Shannon Kovacs

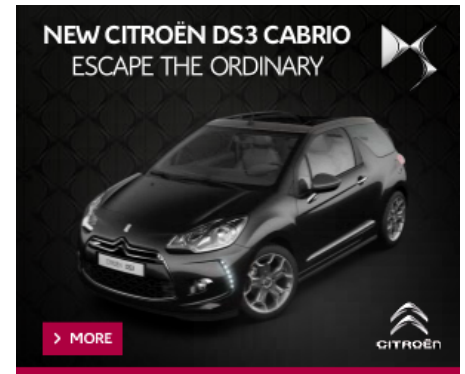

If I had to choose my favourite type of food it would be easy; Italian. I just can't get enough of pizza's and pasta dishes, and don't even get me started on gelato. So when Dine Mile High asked Cosmo if I wanted to go along to their latest pop-up event – Destination Sicily – we knew I couldn't pass it up. And whilst Kat was unable to attend, I was happy to go in her place to sample the food, after all, we'd heard amazing things about this night and had been wanting to go for a good while.

The idea behind Dine Mile High is taken from the golden age of air travel. Every couple of months the team create a fantastic menu from a different country and invite you to 'travel' with them to the particular destination. I struck gold with Destination Sicily.

The whole experience was absolutely fantastic. I made my way down to a Central London venue and checked-in at passport control, where I was greeted by a couple of friendly air hostesses who gave me my boarding pass. From there, I made my way through to the departure lounge, where I was served a fabulous Campari cocktail and nibbles were passed around (including deep fried courgette, my personal fave).

After receiving our complimentary two free cocktails, we 'boarded' the restaurant, which was kitted out beautifully to look like a rustic, Sicilian town and we were treated to a sumptuous four course meal. For the starter, it was all about the marinated swordfish in orange and cinnamon with fennel and pine nuts. Next up was the most delicious pasta dish, Pasta alla Norma, and it was HUGE! I shared it with five people, but it could have easily doubled up as the main course.

The main course was a beautiful slow roasted pork belly with braised hispi cabbage, white beans and Sicilian lemon. By this point I was close to bursting my jeans, but it was too good to stop.

Our final course was the icing on top of the cake – burnt peach gelato, pistachio praline and amaretto biscotti. I was in my element.

If you're after a lively, hilarious evening, this fantastic pop-up experience is for you. The staff were absolutely brilliant and their Italian accents were very convincing. The wine flows non-stop and you get to mingle with other guests.

For more information on Dine Mile High and to find out about their upcoming destinations, check out their website www.dinemilehigh.com. We'll certainly be checking in with them again soon.
